LEAGUE GAME PREVIEW

V

We saw two versions of the Bulls last round, the understrength squad that was unable to keep pace with the depth of the Airs for two out of the four quarters and the pace controlling where they squeezed the life out of the Jets half-court defence. Corey Webster is as smooth as ever with the ball in hand and his 24.1 points per game seems like his floor moving forward game by game. Webster will put pressure on the scoreboard with the help of Giddy Potts and the returning Jayden Bezzant, and when combined with efficient performances from Anzac Rissetto the offence can tick along against anyone.

The key performance may need to be delivered by Leon Henry to control the glass against a Hawke's Bay Squad that will be playing its second game in three days. For the Hawks this will be about pace, if they are able to get the ball off the rim and push in transition, they will find the road more easily travelled than if they are forced to perform in the half court. Tajuan Agee, Jack Salt and Hyrum Harris can play the strong-man game as well as any team in the NBL, but they will be tested by a Bulls squad that relishes contact. The result will come down to the 3-point line, with the team that wins the battle there likely to get the scoring boost needed to snatch a win that will propel the victor into the finals. - Casey Frank
